PROTEST: Ford Dunton and Warley workers on strike.
Picture by Martin Dalton

Ford workers strike over pay and pensions

By Pat Jones

WORKERS from Ford Dunton and Warley joined staff across the UK in Monday's one-day strike to protest about plans for the company's 'two-tier' work force.

Staff are fighting the car giant's proposal to close its final salary pension scheme to employees joining the company in the future – and also to pay them lower wages.

Roger Maddison, national officer for Unite union which is backing the strike, said: "We have been attempting to reach a deal for months, but Ford UK is insisting on closing the final salary scheme to new starters."

"Our members will not stand by and allow Ford to create a two tier workforce on pay and pensions."

"The company is also proposing to introduce lower rates of pay for new entrants doing the same work, with no mechanism for progression."

He added: "The union believes this is the 'thin end of the wedge' and will lead to the ultimate closure of the company's final salary pension scheme for all staff."

"We have asked for guarantees this would not happen, but they have not been forthcoming."

He said staff voted by 67 percent on a 100 percent turnout for strike action on May 22, but the union agreed to postpone announcing the ballot result to the public to allow further negotiations with the company.

Mr Maddison added: "Ford must prove that it is committed to the UK by investing in its UK workforce. The UK has the best sales in Europe, there's no excuse to attack the terms and conditions of a new generation of Ford staff."

Brian Bennett, Ford UK's corporate affairs manager, said: "The company categorically denies it intends to close the final salary pension scheme to existing members, and although future hire rates will be lower than present, they will still be among the most competitive in the industry."

"The issue giving rise to the industrial action relates to a disagreement between the Company and a particular group of its employees in relation to their on-going pay and benefit negotiations."

"Ford remains willing and available to continue discussions with the Union representing these workers. The vast majority of the Company's employees are not involved in this disagreement, or the decision to take industrial action."

Other Ford affected by the industrial action were –

- Manufacturing engine/stamping and diesel design centre at Dagenham.
- Manufacturing engine plant, Bridgend.
- Transmission plant, Halewood
- Parts distribution centre, Daventry.
- Transit assembly plant, Southampton.

CHIEF EXECUTIVE TO TAKE CHARGE OF TWO COUNCILS

By Paul Peterson

BARKING & Dagenham Council is to share a chief executive with a nearby borough.

The current head of Thurrock Council, Graham Farrant, will take up the reigns at Barking & Dagenham on a temporary basis within the next few weeks.

It comes following news that Barking and Dagenham's chief executive Stella Manzie will leave after the Olympic Games to take a post at Warwick University.

Thurrock council leader, John Kent, said the decision to share the chief executive role will give Barking time to decide on its long-term plans.

He said: "It will allow the councils to see how a shared chief executive might work and whether there are options for sharing other services."

But Thurrock's Conservative leader Phil Anderson gave a more cautious response.

He said: "This arrangement probably makes sense, but we would like to see more details of how it will work in practice. We know sharing functions with other councils is one way of saving money."

"However, any longer term decisions about sharing staff or services must always be based on one simple principle - Thurrock comes first."

The two councils are currently sharing members of their legal services department and Thurrock Council's monitoring officer Tasnim Shawkat.

Liam Smith, leader of Barking and Dagenham Council, said: "This is an opportunity we cannot afford to ignore. Mr Farrant is ideal for this interim arrangement. He has made some impressive changes in Thurrock and as a former Barking and Dagenham chief executive, he knows the area well and understands the issues we face."

Borough's stars named on Queen's Birthday Honours

A POLICE officer and two residents were among the borough folk included in the Queen's Birthday Honours List this week.

Chief Superintendent Matthew Bell was made an MBE for his work in improving community and police relations in Barking and Dagenham.

Mr Bell said: "I've had a fantastic 27 years in the Met and this award is the icing on the cake. It was a challenging time at Barking and Dagenham but the plans worked and it's a completely different borough now to the one it was before."

Also being made MBEs were Honorary Alderman Frederick Jones and local resident Rita Giles, who were rewarded for their services to the community.

Council leader Liam Smith welcomed the news and said: "I would like to congratulate all our MBE recipients because this recognition is a testament to the selfless service they have rendered to our local people throughout the years."

"The award not only shows recognition for the work they have done in our borough but also helps to put Barking and Dagenham on the map. On behalf of our residents and colleagues on the council, I say a big thank you to all three for the hard work and dedication you have put in to make our borough a better place."

Retired police constable Stephen Rhodes received the Queen's Policing Medal for distinguished service.

During and beyond his service, PC Rhodes made significant contributions to the Metropolitan Volunteer Police Cadets and the establishment of youth clubs across the borough.

HONOUR: Chief Superintendent Matthew Bell has been made an MBE.

Council agree deal over provision of temporary workers

RECRUITMENT firm Adecco have been made responsible for managing the provision of temporary workers at Barking & Dagenham Council.

The contract came into effect last Monday and replaces the previous deal the council held with Matrix.

Councillor Rocky Gill, cabinet member for finance and education, said: "This contract will offer the Council the best terms available and will lead to a reduction in cost, better supplier performance and greater opportunities for local people."

"Working closely with the local Adecco office in Barking and Romford, will ensure that the local authority as the largest employers in the borough is able to tap into local talent in its commitment to supporting residents through the tough times we face."

College instructor carries the Olympic Flame in Glasgow

AN IT instructor from Newham College has carried the Olympic flame through part of Glasgow as part of the national Torch Relay.

Andre Bloem, 31, who works at the college's Learning Line centre in East Ham, had "a fantastic experience" at 8am on June 9 over the two minutes it took to run 300 metres for the city's last torch bearing leg.

Andre spent the night before in Glasgow to ensure he was at the meeting point by 5am to receive his instructions. He then shared the Olympic bus with 21 others to get to his starting point and began his leg by lighting his torch with the previous runner's flame. When he finished, a security team preserved the flame by lighting a Davy lamp with his torch for the next run outside Glasgow.

He said: "The whole thing was a fantastic and very humbling experience. When I finished, there were people who wanted to take photos with me and the torch. They also asked questions about where I was from and how I became a torch bearer. There were also many other torch bearers on the day who had inspiring stories to tell."

Andre's wife Kate and her mother Judi also travelled up to Glasgow to support him. They were very impressed by the warm welcome of the local residents who lined the streets, cheering and waving flags as Andre went past with the torch.

"My wife and parents have told me that they're very proud of me. And I've been getting texts from people in South Africa, which is where I'm originally from," he added.

Andre was selected by the games organisers, LOCOG and nominated by the Cisco Networking Academy because of his work providing industry-standard training in the five Olympic London boroughs. Andre trains secondary school teachers in teaching pupils professional IT skills and also supports unemployed ex-offenders with their studies and into sustainable jobs.

He said: "I definitely feel that the work I'm doing is contributing to the Olympic legacy."

Andre will be part of a special Flame Day celebration put on by Newham College when the torch passes through East Ham on July 21.

Mind the torch

A PSYCHOLOGIST who has dedicated his life to helping blind people 'see' will carry the Olympic Torch.

Michael Proulx has worked at Queen Mary, University of London for the past three-and-a-half years.

He devised a ground-breaking system where he transformed images into sound, to help blind people.

The 36-year-old, who is originally from Arizona, has also championed a campaign to make all cash points accessible to blind people.

Michael, who lives in Redbridge, said: "My research focused on how the brain can process information from the five senses in the lab."

"Suddenly I realised there was this wonderful opportunity to take this lab-based work and do something that could have a real impact on people's lives."

"For some individuals, it really gave them a new way to explore and interact with the world. A person who becomes blind in later life can take back the visual part of their brain and improve their memory or enhance their other senses."

Despite his sterling work with the blind community the dad-of-two said the nomination to carry the torch came out of the blue.

He will be among 116 teams of five carrying the torch between Stoke Mandeville and the Paralympic Stadium at the end of August.

Michael was nominated through the Lloyds TSB nomination campaign.

He added: "Lloyds TSB has agreed to set out steps to make all their cash points accessible. That coincidental connection made me feel I just had to accept."

"The Paralympics will raise awareness that people with disabilities are not necessarily unable to do things, they just have to adapt to a world that wasn't created for them."

TORCH BEARER: Michael Proulx and family get into the Olympic spirit.

Art's changing spaces

A NEW exhibition by Walthamstow artist Jonathan O'Dea was opened by Waltham Forest mayor Richard Sweden on Saturday.

Jonathan's work, Changing Spaces, is a series of 12 three-dimensional abstract works that interact with the changing environment around the Olympic Park and its connection to the Lee Valley Regional Park.

It was opened by Mr Sweden at the WaterWorks Nature Reserve, in Leyton.

Using recycled building materials and found objects from both parks, Jonathan presents wall-mounted sculptures that explore regeneration and the natural and industrial history of the area.

His aim was to produce art that is abstract yet easily accessible.

Jonathan said: "I want people to be curious about the materials and how the artwork is constructed and to link this curiosity with the physical techniques and methods used in the regeneration of brown-field sites like the Olympic Park and the revitalising of Lee Valley Regional Park.

"This interest is partly fuelled by working on construction sites and also by fascination in the visual impact of turning something old into something new."

The centrepiece is a four metre high sculpture, Intervention, which is constructed from a felled tree provided by Lee Valley Regional Park Authority. The imposing and long term sculptural work is located beside one of the main public footpaths leading to the nearby Olympic Park.

Mr Sweden said: "The WaterWorks Nature Reserve is a fitting location for an exhibition that is grounded in our contrasting neighbourhood here in Waltham Forest.

Setting is important in the appreciation of art, especially the visuals arts. I hope the exhibition is shown further afield."

The wall-mounted artwork will be displayed until Saturday, July 8, and the larger sculpture will remain at the nature reserve.

Thames Water says thanks as hosepipe ban ends

Thames Water's hosepipe ban was lifted last week after an extraordinary amount of rain eased the water shortage affecting the South and East of England.

By June 13, the day the ban was lifted, 169% of the month's total average rainfall had already fallen across the London and Thames Valley region.

Before this, April was a complete washout with 262% of the long-term average rainfall, followed by a solid 76% in May.

Dubbed the 'wettest drought in history', the heavens opened within hours of the ban being imposed and stayed open for almost the full duration of the 10-week ban that affected the company's 8.8m customers.

But Richard Aylard, the company's director of sustainability, said a hosepipe ban was the only option and that it was the right and responsible thing to do in the circumstances.

He said: "In early April things looked very different than they do now. We had had the two driest years on record and we had no idea how long it was going to stay dry.

"While we prepared for worst, bringing in restrictions to save water to ensure there would be enough if the dry spell continued, the topsy-turvy British weather had other ideas."

The hosepipe ban showed its worth during the hot spell in May when water demand would normally be expected to be at its highest. But due to the cooperative behaviour of customers, a massive 100 million litres of water a day was saved.

Mr Aylard said: "We would like to say a heartfelt 'thank you' to all our customers for complying with the restrictions, and for their ongoing efforts to use water wisely. They really are much appreciated."

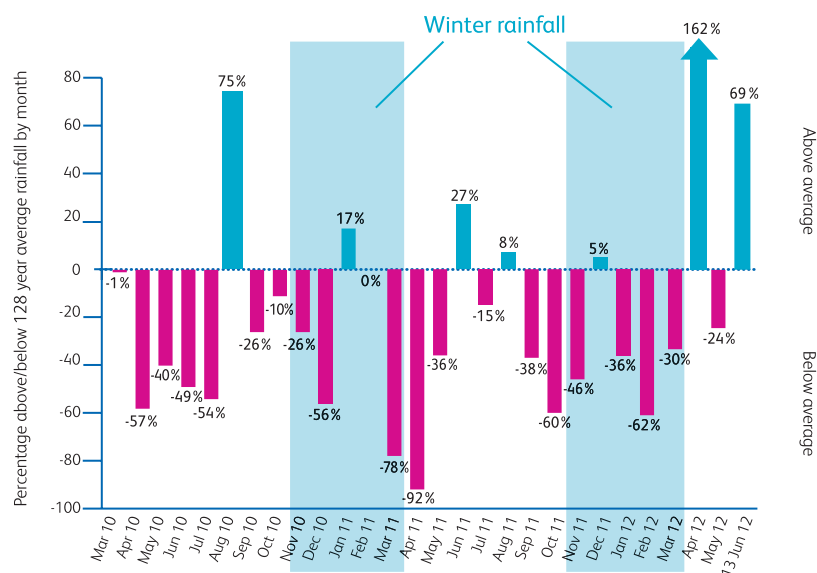

Winter rain still needed

But with the possibility of a third dry winter in a row this year, the firm urged its customers to continue to use water wisely, reiterating its offer of free water-saving devices that can be ordered on the company website (www.thameswater.co.uk).

If the winter rain does not come and fill the aquifers which are deep underground and still parched from the long dry period, it could mean more restrictions next year.

Hosepipe bans were imposed on 5 April by Thames Water and six other firms following the driest two-year period on record and were lifted by Thames Water, Southern Water and Anglian Water on Thursday.

Mr Aylard added: "We are really pleased we can now lift the ban but, with groundwater levels still low and the possibility of a third successive dry winter, we still need to be careful. We don't need a ban, but we do need to ask everyone to keep on using water wisely.

"So if you've bought a water butt this year, please keep using it. If you've started taking shorter showers, please keep it up. And again, thanks for your help and understanding."

Thames Water confirmed earlier this month that it had hit its sixth successive annual leak-cutting target. This means that in addition to the 100m litres of water a day saved by customers adhering to the ban, the company is also saving an additional 60m litres a day, representing six per cent of the 2.6bn litres of water it supplies each day.

THANK YOU

FOR USING WATER WISELY

We'd like to thank all our customers for helping to save water.
Come rain or shine, please continue to use water wisely.

Student shortlisted in youth poetry contest

A WOODFORD County High School student has been shortlisted for the WWF's youth poetry competition, The Future We Want.

Irum Hasan and three of the other four finalists last week met Secretary of State for the Environment Caroline Spelman at an event in the House of Commons.

The competition, launched by WWF in May, invited students aged 11-14 to submit a poem that reflected their hopes for the future of the planet, ahead of the Rio + 20 Earth Summit.

Ms Spelman said: "This poetry competition appeals to young minds, and I have been extremely impressed by the quality of writing and the ideas expressed. I hope other world leaders at Rio+20 have as much vision and passion as these young people."

Actor Idris goes back to roots for colleges award

FORMER local student and now global acting superstar Idris Elba has won a Gold Award from the Association of Colleges.

The Hackney-born star studied performing arts at Barking and Dagenham College in 1992. The award is for former college students who have gone on to excel in their chosen field.

Idris, who grew up in Canning Town, rose to international prominence playing the character Stringer Bell in the acclaimed HBO series The Wire, for which he was nominated for an NAACP Image Award for Outstanding Supporting Actor.

More recently, Idris has played the title role in the BBC series Luther for which he has picked up awards such as the Golden Globe for Best Actor in a Mini-Series or Television Film and a Primetime Emmy Award for Outstanding Lead Actor in a Mini-Series or Movie.

He has appeared in more than 20 films including 28 Weeks Later, American Gangster and Prometheus.

In addition to his extremely busy acting career, Idris is also a DJ and a hip-hop soul recording artist.

Cathy Walsh, principal and CEO of Barking and Dagenham College, accepted the award on behalf of Idris at the Houses of Parliament. Cathy was joined by a 'mini me' for Idris, current performing arts learner Annie PROUD: Cathy Walsh and Annie Hook collect the award.

Hook who said Idris is a big inspiration to her.

One of Idris's former tutors, Jakki Cummings, also helped accept the award.

Idris said: "I felt extremely honoured to be nominated for this award and was delighted when I was confirmed as a winner. Barking and Dagenham College provided me with encouragement and support and I am always grateful for the time I spent there."

Other recipients include inventor Trevor Baylis, boxer Amir Khan and Transport Minister Justine Greening.

Help rehome pets

AN ANIMAL charity is throwing open its doors this weekend to help rehome a variety of pets.

Scores of animals have been dumped at animal charities across east London including two Woodford based charities, Phoenix Animal Care and Poorly Paws.

The two organisations have joined together to show off the animals as part of a wider family fun day this Saturday.

There will be a variety of cats, dogs, horses and rabbits, that all need a home.

Visitors will also be able to enjoy a dog show.

Care volunteer Keeley Pemberton said: "Some of the stories are really sad, one of the cats we found recently was barely conscious and starving. These animals all deserve a nice loving home."

The family fun day and dog show takes place at Debden Sports Club, Chigwell Lane, Loughton. For details call 07879 644372.

Football fans arrested

FOUR people have been arrested in connection with alleged racist chanting at a football match.

About 25 to 30 youths were allegedly seen and heard to be chanting racist slogans during the Dagenham & Redbridge versus Bradford 'Daggers Against Racism' football match on March 3.

Those responsible were thrown out but not arrested at the time. All four arrested – aged between 16 and 20 – have been bailed pending further enquiries.

Speed chicanes

CHICANES will be introduced to Kemp Road, in Dagenham, to stop lorries speeding down the road.

Residents had raised concerns about the lorries with their MP Margaret Hodge last July.

Mrs Hodge said: "I'm really pleased to see the work starting."

Historian talk

HISTORIAN Georgina Green will give a presentation on Clement Ingleby at Valentines Mansion to celebrate the World Shakespeare Festival.

Ingleby, who lived at the mansion, was a Shakespearian scholar.

It takes place on Tuesday, June 26, from 10.30am to 12.30pm. Tickets cost £10 and are available by calling 020 8708 8100.

Grow your own

A FREE event to inspire and facilitate food growing in Leytonstone takes place at The Epicentre, 41 West Street, on Sunday from 4pm to 7pm.

The guest speaker will be Pam Warhurst from Incredible Edible Todmorden, the town in Yorkshire where they are growing food everywhere.

Car crash

POLICE are appealing for information after a car crashed into a house in Walthamstow last Thursday.

It happened at about 5.40am in Grove Road and caused significant damage to the house. The car was a silver Volkswagen Golf GTI. Information to 101.

New players wanted

WADHAM Football Club is looking for new players ahead of the new season.

The club, which was founded in 1966 and is an FA Charter Standard club, has teams from under seven to under 16.

They train on Wednesday evenings at Wadham Lodge, in Kitchener Road, Walthamstow. For more information, call Paula on 07980 347772. The first taster session is free.

Church Chorus

ALL Saints Chorus is to perform Fire on the Green at West Ham Parish Church, in Church Street, on Saturday, June 30, at 7.30pm.

This original work by Newham-born composer and conductor Jon Cullen with libretto by Marva Rees, tells the story of the 13 martyrs burned at the stake on Stratford Green on June 27 1556, who are commemorated in a memorial in the churchyard at St John's Church, Stratford.

Tickets are available on the door, or in advance by e-mailing enquiries@allsaintschorus.org

Uni staff made MBEs

TWO members of staff at the University of East London have been made MBEs in the Queen's Birthday Honours List.

Director of employability and student enterprise Femi Bola was honoured for services to diversity.

Meanwhile, Andy Minnion, director of the Rix Centre, was honoured for services to the education of people with special needs.

Men convicted of killing man in Walthamstow

TWO men have been convicted of killing a man in Walthamstow in March 2009.

Kai Shannon, 20, from Islington, was found guilty at the Old Bailey of Wahab Zaaki's murder last Thursday. He appeared at the same court with Abubaker Alawi, 20, from Leyton, who was found guilty of manslaughter.

Both defendants were also found guilty of GBH and will be sentenced for all offences on July 6.

The court heard how emergency services were called to a stairwell of a block of flats in Attlee Terrace on the night of the attack.

They reported that they had seen Wahab Zaaki attempting to flee the flats. He failed to escape and was stabbed five times. Other local residents rushed to his side after the incident and called for an ambulance, but the 18-year-old died before he reached hospital.

Shannon and Alawi were arrested on suspicion of the murder in May 2010 and bailed pending further enquiries.

During the trial it was revealed that Shannon and Alawi were known to the victim as well as a group called the 'DM Crew'. On the night of the killing, various members of the group had gathered in the stairwell of the Walthamstow flats. The motive behind the attack remains unclear.

Acting Detective Chief Inspector Steve Meechan, who led the investigation, from the Met's Homicide and Serious Crime Command (HSCC), said: "This was a callous, cowardly and premeditated attack upon the young victim, by those he trusted as his friends. The motive for the attack remains unclear, the suggestion being a disagreement over an insignificant sum of money.

"It has taken three years to bring those responsible to justice. These defendants instilled within their peers a reluctance to assist police in this enquiry.

"The investigation team has worked closely within the community and the victims' social group, to help allay fear of reprisals. This resulted in evidence being provided to the court by a key eyewitness, who himself was injured during the attack.

"The actions of these defendants have ended the life of a young man, leaving his family completely devastated. I can only hope that these convictions, have in some small way, helped them to come to terms with their sad loss."

VICTIM: Wahab Zaaki.

GUILTY: Abubaker Alawi.

GUILTY: Kai Shannon.

Drivetime

By Andy Enright

WITH a punchy turbocharged petrol engine, bags of front end grip and a decent ride, the latest Peugeot 208 1.6 THP might not count as a hot hatch, but as a warm one it's absolutely one of the best. Peugeot were once the masters of the fast hatchback. Is this a first step back towards supremacy?

I never feel as if I've really arrived in Portugal until I see a woman old enough to be my grandmother waddling up a street with no pavements whilst carrying no fewer than six shopping bags. Get a bit rural and they're everywhere, gently perspiring their way home from the not so local supermercado. This one must have thought this journey was her last. In my defence, she was on the outside of a really nicely surfaced long hairpin bend and I was at the wheel of a Peugeot 208 1.6 THP.

This is a car that's tough to drive at modest speeds. It's got a great chassis and so a big, sweeper of a hairpin seemed like an invitation to extend it a little. We all get a bit dewy-eyed for the old 205 GTI, but I'm fairly confident that if I'd attempted a corner entry at that speed in a 205, it would have eaten the old lady tailgate first. As it stood, she got some warning from the squealing tyres and the maniacal laughter from two journalists inside. She didn't look very impressed, but national blame was avoided as the car was French registered. C'est la vie.

It's hard to talk about the Peugeot 208 1.6 THP without talk gravitating to the steering. Yes, the steering wheel is set low and small, Peugeot reasoning that it's better to see the dials over the wheel (where the unimportant bases of the dials may be obscured) rather than peering through it where it's more likely that the important bits at the top of the clocks will potentially go unseen. Rather than its position, much discussion is about the feel, or lack thereof, and I'd be the first to admit that the electrically-assisted steering isn't exactly rich in detailed feedback. To counter that, it is accurate and quick, so once you've developed a level of trust, you feel a good deal more comfortable pushing the car a bit harder and learning what it's doing via sound, the seat of your pants and, yes, the messages from the wheel.

And push it you will. Although this 156PS engine isn't as manic as the 1.2-litre three-cylinder petrol unit that's sure to be a holiday hire favourite, it's got enough about it to serve up a decent slug of entertainment. The tiny turbocharger helps it to 60mph in 7.8 seconds on the way to a top speed of 134mph, and there's virtually no turbo lag at all.

The detailing of design is crisp, the surfacing neat and the overall shape is extremely cohesive.

The interior is a major step ahead too, with higher quality finishes and neat infotainment system feature, while both three and five door models offer more occupant space.

The 208 1.6 THP is only offered in upscale Feline trim but, on the plus side of the ledger, the value proposition is pretty strong. For around £17,000, your car will come equipped with 17-inch Oxygen grey alloy wheels, electric, heated and folding door mirrors, an SR1 radiator grille in satin Stealth Grey paint with a dark chrome bead, a sports rear spoiler and chrome exhaust tailpipe as well as colour coded mirrors. Directional front fog lights and rear parking sensors are also fitted.

The 208 1.6 THP is quick enough to get your jollies with but the suspicion that its turbocharged engine might be a bit fond of a drop of 95RON comes to naught. And how. Driven at speeds that won't horrify the local geriatrics, this 208 will average 48.7mpg. Even around town, that figure only drops to 35.8mpg. The 135g/km carbon dioxide figure isn't quite so impressive but it's still distinctly respectable. Even when being caned to within an inch of its life on some of Portugal's best coast roads, the fuel consumption didn't dip below 25mpg, which is impressive, especially as I've seen some quite surprising vehicles dip into single figures when really being wrung out.

Residual values also look very encouraging when stacked against those of the 207 and also the 208's current crop of rivals. There's a significant amount of residual goodwill towards Peugeot that has endured through a period when the company was making some decidedly lacklustre tackle. Now that they're back on a firmly upward trajectory, it's hard to see an economical and well built used hatchback having trouble finding used buyers.

The Peugeot 208 has to count as my pleasant surprise of the year so far. I must admit that given Peugeot's recent run of small cars, I wasn't actually expecting to have fun behind the wheel but I did. You will too. It's impossible not to. The 1.6 THP is a smart way of managing a whole bunch of compromises and about the only complaints I'd level against it are that the steering might not be chatty enough for some, the touchscreen interface is a bit of a clunker and the fact that this super engine is only offered in one body style and one trim level.

Spread the love, Peugeot! If you were thinking of a MINI Cooper but were put off by the fact that it's a MINI, try the Peugeot. It runs the same engine and feels less ostentatious piece of kit. It's handsome without ever appearing showy and is priced well. You'll also feel good about rewarding a company that has turned a huge corner. For that I'm truly thankful.
